TOP SIGHTS IN ADANA

1- Sabancı Merkez Camii

The most imposing mosque in Adana is the six-minaret Sabancı Merkez Camii, rising gracefully from the left bank of the Seyhan River. The largest mosque between Istanbul and Saudi Arabia, it was built by the late industrial magnate Sakıp Sabancı (1933-2004), a philanthropist and founder of the second-richest family dynasty in Turkey, and is covered top to bottom in marble and gold leaf. With a 54m-high central dome, it can accommodate an estimated 28,500 worshippers.

2- Roman Bridge

This Roman-era stone bridge over the Seyhan at the eastern end of Abidin Pasa Caddesi was probably built under Hadrian (circa AD 117-138) and repaired in the 6th century. Ta köprü to the Turks, its 300m-long span had 21 arches - seven of which are now underwater - and carried vehicles up until 2007.

3- St Paul's Catholic Church

Built in 1870 by the Armenian community, this church is still in service today as a Roman Catholic place of worship.

4- Archaeology Museum

Adana's Archaeology Museum is rich in Roman statuary from the Cilician Gates, north of Tarsus. These 'gates' were the main passage through the Taurus Mountains and an important transit point as far back as Roman times. Note especially the 2nd-century Achilles sarcophagus, decorated with scenes from the Iliad. Hittite artefacts and Hellenistic monuments are also on display.

5- Adana Ethnography Museum

Just off nönü Caddesi, this museum is housed in a former Crusader church that later served as a mosque. Currently closed to the public, its collection will be relocated to the proposed New Adana Museum, yet to be built. The Ministry is undecided as to what the former church will be when it reopens: a cultural centre, a museum, or perhaps even a place of worship once more.

6- Great Clock Tower

Near Adana's sprawling covered market (kapalı çarşı), the Great Clock Tower dates back to 1881.

7- Ahl El Kahf (People of the cave)

A pilgrim shrine for both Muslims and Christians.
