Abdominal Massage

The detox effect of abdominal massage provides significant benefits in various conditions such as gas, constipation, intestinal laziness, asthma, irregular menstruation, chronic fatigue, depression, and lower back pain. A complementary Manipura Abdominal Massage is applied for 20 minutes before the Angel of Water (open system colon cleansing).

Angel of water

It is applied with a device that washes and cleanses the intestines. The device, which has individual controls, ensures the emptying of the intestines by allowing water to reach deep folds of the intestine.

Infrared Sauna

When near-infrared light is applied to the skin, fibroblast cells absorb light activity, leading to increased production of collagen and elastin. Since it has been proven to raise body temperature by three degrees, infrared heating technology provides a high-level detoxification experience. Beneficial sweating occurs through the pores during toxin elimination. This sweating supports skin rejuvenation, cell health, and tissue growth.

Steam Room

The steam room is recommended for daily use because it promotes the elimination of toxins accumulated beneath the skin, improves circulation, and regulates the cardiovascular system. The humidity and heat in the steam room expand capillaries, allowing blood to flow more freely. This, in turn, delivers oxygen to tissues more efficiently. The application of this therapy reduces the secretion of the stress hormone cortisol. Additionally, thanks to the heat in the steam room, sinus passages open up, allowing for easier and deeper breathing.

Salt Room

Salt room therapy, recommended for improving your respiration, is created based on the principle of 'breathing with air' that contains microscopic salt particles. It is used to treat respiratory conditions such as asthma, bronchitis, dry cough, lung disorders, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), lung infections, throat infections, skin conditions, pharyngitis, and respiratory tract disorders caused by smoking.
